The weather has opened the spring shearing with a rush and the wool is now being shipped in large quantities. Should good weather continue the wool season will be brought to a close somewhat earlier than last year. Large shipments are now being made in the southern and western regions of Utah and considerable is finding its way east from Idaho.

Eastern prices continue the same as they have been for the past week and a change is not looked forward to.

PEEP AT CURTAIN.

Court and Parties to Suit Visit Saloon Premises.

Court, counsel, defendant and accusers took an adjournment yesterday afternoon in the case of the people against Timothy Higgins, 87 East Second South street, charged with violating the ordinance requiring interiors of all saloons to be plainly visible on Sunday, in order that the height of the day, in order that the height of the roller curtain and shade might be seen. The point involved was as to whether or not a curtain that would not obstruct the view of a tall man if he stood on his tip-toes could be properly called obstructive. According to the city attorney, Sergeant Roberts and Policeman Johnston, for the people, the roller curtain and the window shades are decidedly non-transparent. Attorney A. J. Weber, for defendant, asserted that his client's curtains were

On one occasion Sergeant Roberts replied to an insinuation that his evidence might stand criticism that "he wanted it understood clearly that he was speaking and had been speaking the truth and nothing but the truth."

ONLY A BARTENDER.

Because He Was Not Proprietor,

Charles Nordberg Escapes. Because Charles Nordberg was merely a bartender and not the proprietor of the New State saloon, the case against him for selling liquor on Sunday was dismissed in police court yesterday afternoon. The complaint charged Nordberg, as proprietor of the saloon, with violating the Sunday ordinance, and it didn't develop until Sergeant Roberts, complaining witness, was put upon the stand that defendant was simply a bartender. The fendant was simply a bartender. The case fell through, and on motion of Attorney A. J. Weber for defense, was

A novel point was raised by Attorney A novel point was raised by Attorney Weber, who objected to the proceedings when formally called, on the grounds that the complaint had been sworn to before Deputy Clerk Leary. Weber claimed that Leary, as deputy clerk, had no jurisdiction in this respect. His contention was not upheld by Judge Diehl.

SEND THE BAKER OUT.

Three Men Improve Opportunity to Tap the Till.

The proverbial tall man and short man and their accomplices worked a game on William Everett, a baker at 369 West South Temple street, last Thursday 'night. The scheme, while smoothly engineered, was not especially productive, the till-tappers securing with a few dollars for their pains.

my a few dollars for their pains. Everett's bakery was entered about 7 p. m. Thursday by the three strang-ers, one of whom stated that he deers, one of whom stated that he desired to purchase three loaves of bread. He tendered a $5 bill, which Everett volunteered to change at a near-by saloon. The bill was pronounced void by the bartender, it being a note on a New Brunswick bank. Everett returned, explained that he was sorry but could not accept the bill. The strangers made little remonstrance, but left immediately. Shortly after their departure Everett discovered that during his absence they had "touched" the till. They got less than $2.

WILL LEAVE A SURPLUS.

Baltimore, April 29.—Allen McLane, receiver of the Maryland Trust company, announced today that the Vera Cruz railway, which was principally owned by the Maryland Trust company, has been purchased by the Mexican government at a figure in excess of $4,000,000. Receiver McLane says that this sale will enable the Trust company to pay its debts dollar for dollar and leave a surplus for division among the stockholders.

taining money under false pretenses. The information states that Green sold one-half of a restaurant at Bingham Junction to a man named Neils Johnson for $100, when the property really belonged to P. A. Sorenson.

The court was asked to release Green from custody on the ground that the court below had no jurisdiction in the case because the warrant of arrest was issued without the approval of the county attorney, as prescribed by statutes. Assistant County Attorney Dana T. Smith contended that Green, by waiving a preliminary hearing in the justice's court, and entering a plea of justice's court, and entering a plea of "not guilty" to the charge, forfeited his right to raise the point of Jurisdiction at that time. Judge Morse took the matter under advisement, announceing that he would render his decision

The case was tried before Judge William C. Hall, who gave her a decree. The feature of the suit was the fight for alimony, the defendant claiming he had no such fortune as his wife alleged in her complaint. They were married in Joe Davis county, Illinois, Sept. 12, 1888. The wife said her husband deserted her Oct. 21, 1903. The decree was entered March 16, 1904. decree was entered March 16, 1904.

Brighton Estate in Court.

The double crime of J. M. Shockley was recalled to mind yesterday by Mrs. Margaret Long Brighton, wife of Thomas B. Brighton, one of the street carmen killed, filing a petition in the district court asking that her brother-in-law, Thomas A. Brighton, brother of the deceased, be appointed administra-tor of the estate. It consists of part of lot 1, block 58, plat B, and household goods valued at $200. The petition says the man left five children besides his wife.

The contention was that the proceedings in the lower court were not in accordance with the provisions of the statutes. After the motion had been overruled, Rice was arraigned a second time since his arrest to plead, to the charge. He entered a plea of "not guilty." Judge Morse then set the case for trial May 31.

The Hunter case then came up for disposition. His attorneys filed a demurrer. It was to the effect that the information did not state facts sufficient to cause an action against him. It was argued at length. When the demurrer had been overruled. Hunter entered a plea of "not guilty," and his case was set for June 2.

Waco, Tex., Feb. 1, 1904.—Stephen Joice, who appeared personally before W. L. Tucker tax collector of McLennan county, after being duly sworn, said he was 148 years of age. He is a well known citizen, residing at 623 Mame St., East Waco.

The representative of the News drove to "Uncle Steve's" residence, where for forty years he has been a lawgiver and a prophet to his people.

"I was born," he said to the reporter. "on the eastern shore of the Chesapeake, near the Maryland line, and was well acquainted with the vassals of Baron Thomas Fairfax when he ruled that region. When the first Colonial congress met at Philadelphla, I was there on a visit to my parents, being then a stout young man, accustomed to active life on both gea and land. While I have always been a temperance man nevertheless. I find with advancing years that a stimulant such as Padil recommended to Timothy to be good for my stomach, and to prevent the infirmities of old age, and I always use Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, which I find serves as a superb tonic and general renovator. For diet I, prefer pork, but can eat a little beef and digest it when I take a little Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey after each meal."

Here the old men went to his cupboard and brought out a bottle of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and a teacup. "Some people," he continued, "put herbs in their stimulant, I take mine in half a glass of milk, or water. I take no other medicine."

He then fixed up his midday dose, and, replacing the bottle in the old cupboard, said: "I was born under the reign of George II, but he died before I can remember, and the first king I heard much talk about was George III, I worked for some of the Revolutionary soldiers, and I used to hear them talk lots about George III and his tyranny. My young mistress sang 'The Star Soangied Banner' when it was first set to music, and I was near enough to hear the cannonading of Fort McHenry. It was about the time when the city, of Washington was burned that people began to call me 'Old Man Steve.'"

To combat the forces of disease and preserve vigorous old age, you must feed and nourish the vital spark with Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the true elixh of life.
